A photograph of two young children, a girl and a boy, sitting at a table in a classroom. They are both wearing clear safety goggles with yellow straps. The girl, on the left, has her hair in braids and is wearing a light blue shirt. The boy, on the right, is wearing a green and white striped shirt. They are both focused on a small object they are holding together, possibly a piece of paper or a small toy. In the background, there are shelves with various colorful containers and supplies, suggesting a hands-on learning environment. The text "Cradle-to-Career Education" is overlaid in the center of the image in a large, white, sans-serif font.

Neighborhoods Served

Our focus is on four Atlanta neighborhoods facing some of the greatest needs: English Avenue, Vine City, Ashview Heights and the Atlanta University Center. Over the last few decades, this once prosperous area has experienced broad decline. These historic neighborhoods were once the center of the birthplace of leaders in the civil rights movement—if Sweet Auburn was once one of the most influential centers of Black wealth in the United States, the Westside was one of the most vital centers of Black thought.
